Scrumban as an Evolution of Scrum – Presentation at the Berlin Scrum Meetup ontheagilepath.net/2015/06/scrumban-as-an-evolution-of-scrum-presentation-at-the-berlin-scrum-meetup.html

By Sebastian Radics

This week I had the opportunity to join the great Berlin Scrum Meetup as a speaker and evening facilitator.

I selected Scrumban as an Evolution of Scrum as the topic for the evening and it was an interesting experience with a though provoking presentation and challenging questions and discussions.

Presentation as download from Google Drive

In addition to the 40′ presentation we used a world cafe format to further investigate on these 3 questions:

How will you challenge your team (what additional questions to raise)?

How will you best embed measurements in your process?

What are possible pitfalls/dangers of switching to Scrumban?

Further readings

Scrum, Kanban, Scrumban – a fast overview
Scrum and Scrumban as it's next evolutionary step
Time to abandon sprints? 14+7 arguments for your next steps towards agility
Are you still estimating, apply #NoEstimates and simplify your process – a practical guide
Unleash predictability by using Actionable Agile Metrics for predictability
14 of my books summaries (e.g. Lean from the trenches and Management 3.0)
Handouts used during the presentation

Thanks for the great organization and the active participation and discussions. I'm looking forward for your comments and next meetups.

Special thanks to Ioana Buliga for organizing and taking care and Leanovate for hosting the event.